Kindergarten Department

“But to be young was very heaven.”— Wadsworth

THE aim of the Kindergarten Department is to give that best of all womanly knowledge, the training of the little child.

Part of Creed adopted by Class of 1904. “We believe in little children as the most precious gift of heaven to earth. We believe that they have immortal souls, created in the image of God, coming forth from Him, and to return to Him. We believe that in every child are infinite possibilities for good or evil, and that the kind of influences with which he is surrounded in early childhood largely determines whether or not the budding life shall bloom in fragrance and beauty, its fruit a noble, Godlike character.”

Spring

Out in the woods on the grass soft and green,
Out 'neath the sky all so fair and so blue,
Out where the cowslips and violets sweet
Peep from the leaves where they've long lain asleep ;
Breathing the freshness of all the new world,
Hearing the birds as they call to their mates,
Learning a lesson in Nature's new birth,
Watching the murmuring brook go its way ;
Lazily watching the busy ants work,
Happily dreaming of castles and love,
Loving the trees as they burst into bloom,
Shedding around me the richest perfume.
Thus I lie daily as spring time comes in Happy in living in Nature and God.

If You Were Here

If you were here
I cannot think how happy I should be.
The world, so dark, would wear its crown of gold,
And every flower that blooms along the way
Would hold another meaning in its nod,
And every bird that sings upon the bough
Would utter notes of meaning far more clear,
And every leaf and every twig and stone
Would have a meaning to my heart, O love.
Little songsters twitter in their humble nests
And fill the forest with a symphony,
And every violet in its purple cup
Would blush a deeper purple in my love
If you were here.

When We Were Twenty-One

“READ IT! Read it! You must read it to us!” called Bess, coming down the attic stairs, gaily waving a greatly-worn leather-backed blank book in her hand.

“Aunt Katherine,” to whom she spoke, was a white-haired, sunny-faced old lady of about seventy years, and a general favorite with the young people, who all called her “Aunt” regardless of relationship. “Well, well, my dear! But what is it?” she said, cheerily, as Bess joined the group of merry young girls gathered around her.

“Why, ’tis my old diary that I kept at Winthrop College when I was just a young girl like the rest of you, and loved fun and mischief as much as any one—more, perhaps, than was for my good. But what part shall I read you? Here! I think I’ll start at the new year,” and, with a reminiscent smile, she opened out the yellow-leafed volume and began

Thursday night, Dec. 31, 1903.

Tomorrow, the first day of the new year, and, at the same time, the first day of the leap year 1904! (May all our old maids profit by it!) Shall I, or shall I not, make resolutions? “That is the question.” On first thought I think I shan’t, for they’re too much trouble to keep; on second and better thought, I think I shall, if they’ll make me any better for the keeping, for I need it sadly, heaven knows. Then, be it resolved:

I That I shall cease to “slip”—for I may be caught some day, and in these days of restriction it might mean several months of the same.

II That I shall study harder—for IVs are to be had for less than the asking, recently.

III That I cut no more recitations, for the same reasons as the afore-mentioned.

IV That I will sweep the trash into the dust-pan instead of under the trunk, as formerly—the same “method in my madness” as before, on account of the peering eyes of “P_____.”

V That I do not spend half my time “hanging around” for the mail, since “Uncle Sam” has ceased to be of any service to me.

VI That on retiring, I do not collect all the stray shoes in the room to throw at my room-mate’s head when her quiet (?) slumbers disturb the dead of night. And, too, that if by any strange chance they should awake her, I shall not pretend that I threw the above-mentioned shoes at a rat.

VII That I say my prayers on the floor every night instead of a few unuttered words in bed.

VIII That I get to breakfast on time at least one morning in the week—Sundays not included.

IX That I do not pollute the sacred precincts of my room by profane language—or, to use the mild Winthrop expression for it, by “slang.”

X Last, but not least, that I try to “love my enemies,” the girls who room above me—the 5:30 risers, who wear the proverbial seven league boots—included.

Enough of those! I thank my stars that I can break all rules tonight, throw shoes, and do anything else before I begin the struggle of trying to keep resolutions.

Friday night, Jan. 1, 1904.

Went to a "watch meeting" in E. and M. D's room. We drank to the health of the new year with coca-cola, and told ghost stories. Were sure we heard teachers once or twice, and after struggling under beds amidst the accumulation of ages of dust, rushing behind the screen, and falling into the wardrobe, found there was no one out there, and that our trouble was all in vain. The second time, however, we were not so lucky, as M. D. made so much noise forcing her avordupois into the wardrobe that the teachers insisted on coming in. Of course the two girls whose room we were in were sleeping peacefully, and all would have gone well, but M. D., in an attempt to change her rather trying position, turned over the wardrobe, and, as it had no back, she was left standing against the wall with all those teachers gazing at her. So they pulled the rest of us out from our hiding places with the assurance that we would be reported. I spent the rest of the night out with some other girls, anyway, and there were so many of us—three in one single bed—that I had to sleep with my feet on a box under the bed, amidst all sorts of rubbish, and was in mortal terror whenever a rat chanced to roam my way. Of course we cut breakfast next morning, as it was holiday. But there's that old light bell! Here goes to the fulfilling of resolution VII!

Saturday night, Jan. 2.

Had to go to recitations today, and, of course, didn't know a thing. So there's another resolution broken! Why did I make them anyway? No mail again today! Has everybody forgotten me?

Sunday, Jan. 3.

Cut breakfast again this morning, but got so hungry before dinner, vowed never to do it again. Didn't go to church, was too sleepy. Stayed at home and read "Out for the Coin;" by the author of "John Henry." "L. A—," came in and caught me doing it; told me it wasn't the proper thing to do during study—I mean meditation hour. The girls above kept up the usual racket, turning over wardrobes, performing all sorts of acrobatic feats, "doing stunts," "looping the loop," etc., at least that's what it sounded like to me. Don't tell me about loving your enemies! I'm cured of the habit. Went to sleep in chapel tonight. Am afraid "D. B." saw me, as he was sitting not far behind me.

Monday, Jan. 4.

Didn't have time to get up my clothes before breakfast, so made a hasty exit after a rather hurried meal, fixed them, and, taking them out on the piazza, hastily dropped them down the elevator without looking. Instantly there arose a yell from one of the "Sunny Africans" who help carry the clothes to the laundry—I had dropped them on her head! Amidst a volley of words not suited to the ears of a modest young school girl, I withdrew with as much haste as my dignity would allow. Went to "Chorus" at twelve, and up town at three. Had "lots" of fun at the latter, but came back "broke." Who'd think that fried oysters and "dopes" would absorb so much? But enough of this! I must wend my weary way to the practice rooms.

Tuesday, Jan. 5, 1904.

Got to breakfast on time this morning, said my prayers on the floor last night, and didn't throw any shoes at my room-mate. I'm surely "coming on!" Have been "doing" German all night, I most sincerely hope that some day there'll be a universal language, for I'm tired of this dig, dig, dig, on "Deutsch," etc.

Wednesday, Jan. 6.

Nothing "doing." Knew my lessons fairly well. Wouldn't write in you at all, old diary, if it were not to mention the fact that I got a letter. Actually got a letter! There's the half-past bell. O, if some kind person would only ask me to a feast! Was never so hungry in my whole life.

Thursday, Jan. 7.

"C——" called me up today, at this late hour, about that affair New Year's night, but we pleaded off on account of its being holiday—not without a "stiff" lecture, however. Sprained my wrist in some way this morning, and reporting at the infirmary for a remedy, was rewarded by a black pill. Haven't a doubt that the injured member would have been entirely well by now if I had "indulged," but couldn't bring aforesaid pill home without help, so confided it to the "tender mercies" of a vase in the infirmary office. Came home and found a letter sticking in my door, so thought probably some one had divined my feelings and actually condescended to write me. But no! E. had put it there to get me back for a trick I had played on her, for I found upon close examination that the post-mark it had was glued on. I am tired and home-sick! O, if it were only June! Think of five months more! If people would only write to you occasionally! But "nobody loves me."

Friday night, Jan. 8.

The same old thing—nothing "doing!" Thank heaven that tomorrow is Saturday, even if I do have German on Saturdays, and music, etc., etc. Had cooking today; made plum pudding, but "C. J——" wouldn't let us eat any till next time, though she had some from the other class. I'm so hungry! I'm going and steal some of Bell's beloved jam.

Saturday, Jan. 9.

Have been over to the dance hall, and am going to spend the night with Bess. Am afraid to stay at home, for last night while my tired brain was filled with visions of huge cakes with layers of long, thick letters, goods boxes full of Huyler's candy, and all "such stuff as dreams are made of," there was a hasty stampede across my face, and my sleeping brain recognized my ever-present arch-enemy, the rat. With one "ding!" I sprang into the middle of the floor, much to the terror of my sleeping room-mate, who thought I was in the midst of a horrible nightmare until I hastily explained that it was something much worse. Needless to say, I didn't waste much time sleeping last night! I expect to spend my last cent tomorrow for a rat trap and a hunk of cheese. But Bess will wonder what has become of me. Away with resolutions! They do me more harm than good. I'm going to wait till next year, and then, old diary, I declare I'll keep them! "So long!"

"And to think that's a week of Aunt Katherine's school days!" said Nell. "Things were so funny then. Fancy having to cook things instead of using condensed pellets! No wonder it was the day of the hungry school girl. And then not having noise-proof walls, wireless telephones, telegraphs, and all that sort of thing! How inconvenient! But it all sounds so quaint and "old timey."

But come, girls! It's time for us to go. Is the air-ship at the door? Yes? Well, good-bye Aunt Kate, there's hope for the rest of us if you were once so mischievous."

But old Aunt Kate was lost in her reverie and saw only the old-fashioned buildings of the Winthrop of her days, and the familiar faces of the crowd of girls who flocked in and out.

The Great Prize

EACH of these pictures represent a familiar scene. To the person who guesses them correctly, and sends in a line explaining the situation, we will give a prize. To help you solve these interesting puzzles, we will state that the first is the——same girl. This will be enough assistance if you think hard. Some one is going to win the big prize. You may be the lucky one. It will not cost you one cent. But this is not all. The persons competing in this contest will be admitted free of charge into examinations, our great contest beginning May 13, 1904. The first prize in the May contest is a Pass ; the second, a Condition ; the third, a Failure. Just think of it. You have an average of six chances, and there are 500 girls, making a total of 3,000 chances. To enter the big contest easily, train yourself in this one. Study these pictures carefully. In case of a tie the prize will be distributed equally. Send in your solutions at once and get the first Great Prize—sixty per cent. on Model School. Second prize, Astronomical Solution to Showalter. Third prize, an Abbreviated Latin or German Lesson. We are reliable, and the prizes will be distributed fairly. This chance means a fortune to you. Send your solutions to the Class of 1904

There are many tales of a wonderful class
Such as were not told before,
So I'll tell you in rhyme of deeds not done
By the class of 1904.

They never broke those thirty rules
Because they were too shy,
Never wanted Christmas holiday
—good reason why.

Never cared at all for Huylers,
Never wanted curly locks,
Never thought of having a feast
Until their neighbors got a box.

Never wanted pictures taken
Afraid they'd scratch the glass;
Never cared to go a shopping
This energetic Senior Class.

Never hated their senior caps
Until Spring uniforms were sold,
Never cared to take "Geology" (?)
After the faculty were told.

When you meet the tripping Seniors
Wearing panamas galore,
They'll give you a lengthy sequel
To the Class of 1904.

The Phenomena were once compelled to perform, and the feats accomplished were truly wonderful. Selden Epps first appeared on the scene and after an ovation at the rate of five hundred words per half minute with gestures of equal rapidity, she gave one shrill call in answer to which Eva Beach and May Chaplin came running through a side door, while Mrs. Cochran unexpectedly appeared without any apparent entrance way. Instantaneously Bessie Counts and Willie Harris rushed down from the ceiling and began to do the Conjurer and Sorceress acts. Hannah Mobley turned her shrew taming power upon her, while Bertha Jacobs shadowing rapped weird scenes before her, Eva Beach called down magic aid and Selden Epps again unloosed her tongue. Under the combined influence of Magic, Sorcery, Conjurey, Shrewery and the above mentioned Powers of Darkness, Mrs. Cochran was transported by Spirits to her office, and Selden Epps, looping the loop, rushed through the dormitory chattering volubly to tell the news while the remaining Phenomena continued the performance.

Recommendations

To Whom it May Concern :

On looking over the college records of the following young women I find that their work has been most excellent.. Though the work of the four years has been very strong, the senior year has proved the strongest in breaking dining-room rules. With all they have impressed me as women of noted characteristics, but not steady in application. Every year's record shows excellent marks—in many cases averaging from fifteen to forty per cent. The fact, that they are so recommended here proves that they are equal to any emergency.

We beg the notice of "Crazy Mary's Minute Men" to Margaret Leckie, who has been known to leave her downy couch as the last stroke of the breakfast-bell was dying on the crisp morning air, and throwing her belt on her left shoulder, a collar on her right, and filling her mouth with pins, beautifully uniformed she has been seen to reach her table, assisted only by a glance from Mrs. Cochran.

In order that Florence Lide may answer "yes" in reporting for out-door exercises, we recommend that she adopt the profession of engineer on a freight train. (Point to be explained).

May Zeigler—as a professor has most aptly remarked, a young woman of more than average mental ability and not very steady in application, is recommended on account of her very high ambition, as floor-walker on the planet of Mars. If disappointed in this ambition I recommend her as trainer and amuser of Taurus.

Kittie Kirkpatrick with step so light and elastic and form so graceful and willowy cannot but grace the Kirkpatrick-Hooligan Company as leading ballet-dancer.

Carrie Cain is known to all as a distinguished wit, and I take great pleasure in recommending her to fill one of two positions—either as local editor of “Harper’s Bazaar,” thereby preparing her to write the “Love Affairs of an Old Maid,” or as teacher of Arithmetic up to percentage.

Cynthia Neal, though a Tom Thumb in respect to voice and stature is a Hercules in respect to conceit or self-estimation. But the point I am about to make is “———”

Ida Salley, a young woman who for many years has played the role of short and sweet; she is most cordially recommended to all persons as a woman of high temper, and curbed mett(al)le enough to raise a serpent in the wilderness.

Kate Plowden, a young person of many admirers, will fill well the position of a pedagogue in a clay-hill school house. She will also be an efficient leader in social circles, as her favorite amusement is “chewing the rag.”

Sadie E. Reynolds, a lady of curles, airs, (ears) and graces, is most heartily recommended as a subject or predicate of a cartoon. We cheerfully recommend this as her epitaph, "With many words of meaningless tones, she faithfully tended——"

Ho

Mae Delle Barre, the most portly of the young women would fill well Mrs. O'Bryan's "Chair." But judging from her fondness for all connected with pedagogy, I think she will attain greater success as instructor of that subject. No one need fear placing their youngest children under her care, for she loves her neighbor as herself.

Ho

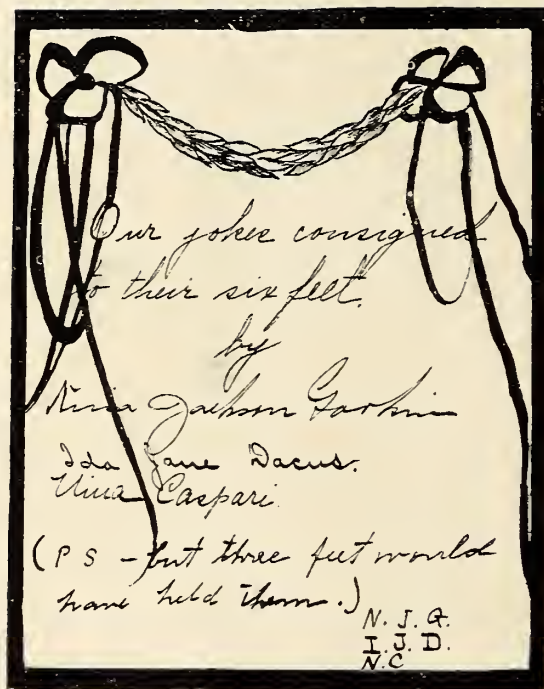

For losing her head and muttering wildly when "called up," for looking through "cute eyes," and for always giggling at the wrong time, Bessie Davis is recommended to be put under restriction until the cuteness of the confinement wears off.

Ho

To all looking for a manager of a circus, a manager of greater ability than Barnum or Bailey, one who if animals can not be found will make them, we most joyfully present Harriet Ervin.

Class Song

We gather today 'round our own class tree,
And sadness fills each heart,
For we're leaving behind us the last long year,

And soon the Seniors part.
We're weary of studies, of failures, of threes,
Of Model School and Mace,
Yet struggling and sighing and longing for
June,
Each Senior keeps her place.

Winthrop, farewell, Winthrop, farewell,
Farewell to the days of yore,
Seniors, farewell, Seniors, farewell,
To the Class of 1904.

The path has been stony, and steep, and long,
And few stars light our way,
Yet the end of conditions and glory of
June

Even we shall see some day.
To you, fellow students, we leave one wish,
That as the years shall pass,
And you gather around by our class tree
Forget not our glorious class.
